NEWSLETTER OF THE SCHOOL OF ACCOUNTANCY

JON M. HUNTSMAN SCHOOL OF BUSINESS
UtahStateUniversity

The past year has been busy and exciting. As you thumb through this year's newsletter, I hope you will get a sense of our shared commitment to seeing USU's School of Accountancy achieve national prominence, and join us in this endeavor. Our strategic plan is focused on executable actions to increase in size, quality, and image. I believe these efforts will strengthen the value of an accounting degree for our current and future alumni.

Through targeted marketing efforts, such as the Quigley Ambassadors Program, we have already begun to achieve significant growth, surpassing our own aspiration benchmarks. This growth enables us to focus on powerful quality dimensions. For instance, students must now pass "entrance exams" to progress into enrollment in upper division accounting courses. We are also benefiting from positive affiliation with the many initiatives of the Jon M. Huntsman School of Business. All of these improvement processes will produce an increasing proportion of students able to deliver the kind of exciting results reported in this newsletter.

In a world that seems plagued with fractured values, I am very pleased with the personal attributes and integrity of our students. I envision the School of Accountancy as a place where these great students come to study deeply and in earnest.

Our goal is that they will receive an accounting education that is second to none, and this will propel them to positions of leadership from which they can become influential for the greater good. From an academic standards perspective, we know how to do this, and we will succeed. Programs of national acclaim also enjoy strong alumni support, and I invite you to rally in support of our bold vision.

A Chance to be Involved

AT THE FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING STANDARDS BOARD (FASB) HEADQUARTERS

Brian Monsen has been selected to serve a year-long appointment working as a Postgraduate Technical Assistant (PTA) at the FASB headquarters in Norwalk, Connecticut beginning July, 2010. Only 12 candidates from universities throughout the nation are selected annually for this opportunity. "With the recent turmoil in the capital markets and with international accounting standards coming more into focus, this will be a very exciting time to be at the FASB," said Monsen. "I am thrilled at the chance to be involved in the rule-making process."

Monsen served as president of the Delta Omega Chapter this past year, and completed his MAcc degree in May. Upon completion of his PTA appointment, he will begin employment with Deloitte in Salt Lake City.

A Real Honor

DR. FULLERTON NAMED ARTHUR ANDERSEN ALUMNI PROFESSOR

Dr. Larry Walther, Head of the School of Accountancy in the John M. Huntsman School of Business, has announced that Dr. Rosemary R. Fullerton has been named as the Arthur Andersen Alumni Professor of Accounting.

Dr. Fullerton is an internationally recognized authority on Lean Accounting and has over 30 research disseminations appearing in leading accounting and operations journals and conference proceedings. She has presented her research findings at numerous conferences in the U.S. and abroad. In addition, she has co-authored a book, Accounting for World-Class Operations. Dr. Fullerton is a two-time recipient of the Shingo Prize for Excellence in Manufacturing Research. She has also been twice recognized as School of Accountancy Researcher of the Year.

Dr. Jay H. Price, Arthur Andersen Executive Professor, was instrumental in establishing the endowment for the Arthur Andersen Alumni Professorship. Of Dr. Fullerton he says, "Rosemary represents the best tradition of Arthur Andersen & Co.—Think Straight: Talk Straight – accompanied by hard work, innovative thinking, continuous training, ethical conduct, and great respect for others—in Rosemary's case, for her students."

Dr. Fullerton has excelled as a teacher, researcher, and as a graduate mentor. Lacee Wilkey, 2009 Huntsman School Valedictorian observed, "As a research assistant to Dr. Fullerton, I have been able to delve into the world of lean accounting. It has challenged my abilities and helped me reach new bounds. As a result of this experience, I am now considering following in Rosemary's footsteps and pursuing a PhD."

Dr. Fullerton joined the School of Accountancy in 1999 after completing her doctoral degree in Accounting at the University of Utah. She previously completed a bachelor's degree in English at Brigham Young University, as well as a bachelor's and a Master of Accounting from Utah State University. Dr. Fullerton is a Certified Public Accountant and is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Utah Association of CPAs, the Institute of Management Accountants, and the American Accounting Association.

Dr. Fullerton teaches both graduate and undergraduate courses in the areas of financial accounting, strategic cost management, and management control systems. While at USU, she has been the recipient of teaching and advising awards, and on numerous occasions has been honored as the escort for the business school valedictorian.

Real-world Problem Solving

The Accounting 6310 cost management graduate students toured the Autoliv plant in Ogden, UT, during the 2010 spring semester. Autoliv is a Shingo Prize winning company that has adopted a Lean culture throughout its organization. At the end of the tour, Staci Gunnell, Controller, discussed with the students how Autoliv's accounting department has implemented lean principles to improve its processes and reporting system. Since Lean is a continuous journey, she indicated how they are always looking for ways to improve. To help the students feel a part of this continuous improvement process, she assigned them one of her department's current projects.

Autoliv has a significant temporary workforce, and the accounting department was asked to find ways to better educate the workforce in understanding the financial impact their personal efforts contributed to the organization. Each four-member student team presented their improvement ideas to Staci and three of her colleagues, who judged the projects for feasibility, creativity, and ease of implementation. The winning team of James Harrington, Matt Liechty, Megan Low, and Brynn Seamons received Autoliv Kaizen backpacks. Staci indicated that she was very impressed with the overall quality of the suggestions and choosing the winning team was a difficult decision. The students were appreciative of the support from Autoliv and the opportunity to participate in a "real-world" problem-solving exercise. Autoliv has willingly provided time and resources to our MAcc students on many occasions. We commend its generosity and commitment to enhancing the education of our students.

Hitting the Mark–Top 10 Again!!

For the second year in a row, CPA Exam candidates from Utah State University achieved a Top 10 national ranking for CPA exam pass rates! The 2009 National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) report shows that only three universities can make this claim: USU, BYU, and the University of Washington.

Dr. Larry Walther, head of the School of Accountancy, called the two-time ranking "a significant accomplishment." Our students' strong work ethic and commitment to excellence, coupled with outstanding faculty who build lasting personal relationships with their students create a coveted formula for success. Small class sizes and caring, accessible professors encourage a comfortable learning environment…a public school with a private touch.

The strong performance on the CPA exam of our MAcc students contributes to the growth of our graduate program's national reputation. Recruiters recognize the quality of our graduate students and continue to reward them with excellent job opportunities at top international, national, and local accounting firms. It is apparent to all that USU accounting students are first rate!

Fellowship & Friendship

THE EDNA SOUTHWORTH FELLOWSHIP

This year the School of Accountancy was the grateful recipient of a generous $240,000 contribution from the late Edna Southworth, a long-time friend of Jay Price. Although she attended Northwestern University, she visited Jay in Logan several times and according to him, "was quite impressed with the people she met and the quality of the university and its students."

Ms. Southworth spent much of her working life with the Chicago Transit Authority in various capacities. She was offered a position with PriceWaterhouse at a time when women were not commonly offered positions in public accounting. She also thought highly of the people at Arthur Andersen where Jay spent most of his professional career. Because of these relationships and experiences, Jay believes that, "it is fitting that her bequest be divided between scholarships earmarked for women students and the Arthur Andersen Professorship endowment."

As a department we are extremely grateful to Edna Southworth for this generous gift and believe it will assist us in our continual efforts to attract top students and to improve the education we provide to those students. We also express our gratitude to Jay Price for his ongoing generosity and dedication to the SOA.

Quigley Ambassadors in Action

Through the support and generous donations of Jim and Bonnie Quigley, a group of students from the School of Accountancy were selected to serve as Quigley Ambassadors during the 2009-2010 year. The students are chosen by SOA faculty each year based on academic achievement, class performance, and all around charisma. Ambassadors for this year were: Kami Huntsman, Patrick Munson, Eddie Norton, David Peaden, and Hannah Spinner. The Quigley Ambassadors' role is to assist in the promotion and recruiting process for the School of Accountancy at Utah State University. "We strive to educate students about the many opportunities that exist in industry, government, and public accounting," said Munson.

The ongoing objective of the ambassadors is to reach out to high schools and junior colleges in the region to raise the awareness of the outstanding accounting program at Utah State and the extensive opportunities a degree and career in accounting bring. "We believe our efforts will be successful in the promotion and recruiting process for the School of Accountancy at Utah State University," said Huntsman. "We strive to have one-on-one contact with students. Our focus is different from other college recruiters because we want quality not quantity, and we have tremendous administrative and faculty support. The sky is the limit!"

Honorable Mention achieved at Deloitte Tax Case Study Competition

The USU undergraduate tax team achieved Honorable Mention status at the 2009 Deloitte Tax Case Study Competition. Each team member received a $200 cash award for their accomplishment. In addition, the School of Accountancy received a commemorative plaque and a $2,000 award for the benefit of tax education. Team members were Amber Buatte, Jordan Gardner, Kyle Vogele, and Steven Morrill. Vance Grange serves as advisor to the tax teams.

Learn to Do your Job & Do it Well

CLARK WILKINSON HONORED AS THE SOA DISTINGUISHED ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR IN APRIL

Clark counseled students of the importance of persistence in their first job as the key to professional success. "Learn to do your job and do it well," he said. "Opportunities will open up as you acquire experience through hard work and determination."

Clark earned a BSA from the University of Utah in 1986 and an MBA from Utah State University in 1992. He has been a Certified Public Accountant for 17 years and holds a series 7 securities license as well. He is a partner and owner of Wilkinson, Cooley and Company CPA's located in the heart of downtown Salt Lake City, and provides a variety of services ranging from personal and business tax preparation to IRS representation, management consulting, financial consulting, and financial products.

Having a keen interest in community and public affairs, Clark serves as the Key Person Committee Chairman of the UACPA, a position he has held for 11 years, as well as the past chairman of the UACPA Political Action Committee. He also serves on the School of Accountancy Advisory Board. He was recently named the 2009 Outstanding CPA in Public Practice.

A native of Utah, Clark is a devout Aggie. He resides in Davis County with his wife, Janie, of 22 years, and their 4 children. Their oldest son is currently serving an LDS mission in New Jersey and will return to USU this fall.

The Engine that keeps the SOA Running Smoothly

MARY ANN CLARK RECEIVES AWARD

Mary Ann Clark, Assistant to the Department Head of the School of Accountancy, received the prestigious USU Professional Employee Award for the third quarter of 2009-10. This is a very fitting tribute to Mary Ann, who is known as the engine that keeps the SOA running smoothly. Her outstanding service to the SOA faculty and students is unparalleled.

Mary Ann has counseled and guided hundreds of students through their academic careers, and is a critical link to our alumni. She is the consummate professional: efficient, cheerful, reliable, uplifting, and engaging. As her boss, Larry Walther, said, "Mary Ann is the sustaining element that drives our operational excellence."

Mary Ann has worked at Utah State for nearly 18 years. The three SOA department heads she has served under and the faculty, staff, students, and alumni all know how lucky they are to have associated with her in the SOA for the past 13 years. Congratulations Mary Ann for a well-deserved recognition!

Setting Your Moral Clock

The 33rd Intermountain Accounting Seminar was held on October 21, 2009, at the Eccles Conference Center on the Utah State Campus. Featured keynote speakers included: Edward W. Trott, former member of the FASB; Harry L. "Hank" Gutman, Principal, KPMG; Jason Collins, Partner, Diamond McCarthy LLP; and Scott Taub, former deputy chief accountant at the SEC. Breakout session speakers included: Wes Yeomans and Joel Van Cott of Deloitte, Dave Allen of Grant Thornton; and Reuben Cook and Bryant Armstrong of Squire & Company. Utah's Economic Outlook was provided by luncheon speaker Kelly Matthews of Wells Fargo & Company.

The seminar speakers covered a variety of interesting and important topics including: fair value measurements in financial reporting; federal tax legislative activities; accountant's liability; and the convergence with international accounting standards. The concurrent sessions included financial reporting and tax updates and information on XBRL.

Christine Buckley, CFO of Swire Coca-Cola in the United States, received the Professional Achievement Award during the seminar. Buckley, an SOA alumnus, credited her professors and classmates with helping her get a good start on her career. She told business leaders and students that it is important for them to "set their moral clock" before they are faced with ethical dilemmas. She said students need standards they go into the workplace. to know what their are before faculty.

Jeffrey T. Doyle

School of Accountancy and Jon M. Huntsman School of Business Researcher of the Year

Jeffrey T. Doyle is the George S. Eccles Chair in Capital Markets Research in the School of Accountancy at Utah State University. His research is focused on the use of accounting information by capital market participants. Besides his outstanding portfolio of publications in elite academic journals, his research has been quoted in several leading business publications, including the Wall Street Journal, BusinessWeek, The New York Times, and Fortune. Dr. Doyle's research has impact well beyond the academic realm, attracting widespread attention and interest from professionals in the financial services and money-management industry.

Rosemary Fullerton

School of Accountancy Faculty Advisor of the Year

Rosemary Fullerton is one of the first accounting professors that declared accounting majors encounter. In every class she teaches, she makes an effort to learn each student's name and get to know them as individuals. Her door is always open to students seeking her advice with career planning and more. She is frequently asked to act as the escort for the Huntsman School of Business valedictorians. As advisor to the Quigley Ambassadors, Dr. Fullerton selects and advises student Ambassadors, who are charged with promoting to potential university students the accounting profession and the benefits of earning an accounting degree from the School of Accountancy. Professor Fullerton is a role model in terms of her professional demeanor, her knowledge of the profession, and her ability to motivate people to strive to do their best.

Richard L. Jenson

School of Accountancy & Jon M. Huntsman School of Business Graduate Mentor of the Year

Richard Jenson serves as the Director of the Masters of Accounting Program. In this role he meets with each MAcc student on many occasions, from their first point of contact with USU's graduate program through completion of all graduation requirements. Dr. Jenson has been instrumental in significantly raising the quality of incoming MAcc candidates. He spends many hours counseling and encouraging students who need extra help or career advice. He is genuinely engaged and concerned about the educational experience of our students, and guides them to successful results.

Jack W. Peterson

School of Accountancy & Jon M. Huntsman School of Business Teacher of the Year

Jack Peterson has been affiliated with USU for over 25 years. Professor Peterson brings a wealth of relevant business and accounting experience into the classroom. He is very unique in that he teaches a wide variety of accounting courses, including financial, cost, managerial, tax, and audit subject matters. His versatility and ability to deliver a quality product in each course he teaches makes him an extremely valuable part of the School of Accountancy faculty. In order to keep students engaged, Professor Peterson devotes considerable attention to classroom methods that involve high-energy presentations and student interaction. He puts students as his first priority, and makes each student feel important and valued.

Are You "All-In?"

From public founded and public funded, to public affiliated. This has been the history of most state universities, and USU is no exception. Increasingly, higher education is becoming more self-supporting via higher tuition and alumni support.

This is no surprise, and we all understand the many reasons. We also all understand the broader importance of higher education to promoting the quality of life we all enjoy. Therefore, it becomes vitally important to look to alumni for financial help.

Fortunately, there are lots of alumni. The School of Accountancy already has over 5,000 graduates. There is strength in numbers, and you can see the enabling power of broad participation in annual gift campaigns.

The SOA recently launched a challenge to area CPA firms and businesses, via the All-In Campaign. Organizations with 100% alumni participation in the annual gift campaign are now being honored with the USU SOA "All-In Award."

The SOA is pleased to announce that HJ and Associates is our first honoree for having 100% alumni participation! HJ & Associates is a full-service locally owned CPA firm located in Salt Lake City with a professional staff of nearly 25. HJ employs 6 USU alumni at all ranks, and they all contributed to the annual campaign. We thank and appreciate HJ and Associates for their 100% support, and look forward to honoring additional firms and businesses in the upcoming year.
