

USU's Beta Alpha Psi Wins First Place in Competition

04/27/2021

Utah State University's Delta Omega chapter of Beta Alpha Psi won first place in the 2021 Rocky Mountain Region "Best Practices - Invest in Yourself" competition.

In this year's competition, teams recorded and submitted their presentations electronically to regional conference planners, instead of presenting them in person. The winning team was led by Colton Foy and Diana Stoddard, with Lacey Wilkey as their co-advisor.

"Without their efforts and leadership, we would not have been able to compete at the top," said BAP advisor, Chris Skousen. "Colton and Diana are tremendous students who are difference makers both inside and outside the classroom for our students."

The presentation will move on to the national competition in August. The "Invest in Yourself" competition demonstrates how the Beta Alpha Psi chapter helps students gain work-ready skills outside the classroom.

Other schools from the Rocky Mountain Region include: University of Colorado at Boulder, University of Colorado at Denver, Brigham Young University, Colorado State University, University of Wyoming, University of Utah, Idaho State University, Montana State University, Fort Lewis College, The University of New Mexico, Weber State University, University of Northern Colorado, and Utah Valley University.
