

No Greater Impact

Jaime Caliendo and Megan Bowen

Education accelerates human potential.

It promotes discovery of individual talents, aptitudes, and interests, awakens within us a sense of unique meaning and purpose, and provides each of us with the tools, vision, and determination to impact the world around us. It shapes who we become, what we do, and how we do it. Education helps make possible the impossible.

At the Huntsman School, that education is provided in the classroom and through real world experiences, through programs designed to challenge perspectives, and by faculty and staff who care deeply about their students.

Individual Stories

Growing up as a cowgirl in a small town in rural Idaho, Hannah Engberson studied her way to a 1-in-a-100 finance job in New York City.

ThriftJam turns extra waste from clothing into new designs going from last in a local competition to being one of six companies in the world part of the Global Student Entrepreneur Awards Competition.

How students go around the world turning poverty-stricken communities into well-run businesses raising hundreds of thousands of dollars and teaching tens of thousands of people how to run businesses.

From Germany to USU, Dr. Anteje Graul is changing the landscape of sustainable transportation through the ASPIRE Initiative.

