
SAEL Students Win National Ethics Competition

by John Ferguson

Just wanted to let you know about some of the great work our students are doing. As you know SAEL puts on an ethics bowl each year. This year, the ethics bowl was changed to a new format and was turned into an ethics video competition. The first and second place winners were encouraged to submit their videos to the National Ethics In Action competition, hosted by the Student Center for the Public Trust. Both submitted and they ended up winning the Grand and the first place prizes in the competition. The first place team is all Huntsman Scholars, as were most of the participants at our local competition. The winners are announced here. Winning videos below:

The students of SAEL have done a great job these past few years supporting the pillar of ethical leadership in the Huntsman School and it is good to see their efforts getting national attention as well.
