Utah State University (USU) had a successful showing at the Phi Beta Lambda (PBL) State Leadership Conference in March. Four out of the five USU teams won first place in their respective events, and all five teams will compete at the national competition in San Antonio, Texas, in June of this year.

PBL is student organization with more than 8,000 members across the United States. The organization is dedicated to building the next generation of leaders by providing students with relevant career preparation and leadership experiences. PBL offers chapter office positions, academic competitions, educational programs, and community service.

PBL also works to bring business and education together in a way that positively impacts students and their communities. The organization prepares students for future leadership positions through hands-on learning experiences and intense competitions. At its core, USU PBL is helping students develop the necessary skills to become responsible business leaders.

A breakdown of the USU students who competed and how they performed in their respective events is included below. You can read more about USU PBL here: <https://huntsman.usu.edu/pbl>.
